;kin achievements brought honor, glory to North

North Side stands "majestic by the stream," a fortress for proud, enthusiastic Redskins. Entering Domeland 1850 strong, students accepted responsibilities which included the upholding of standards and traditions in striving to achieve the title of "true Redskins." Throughout the year, wearers of the Red and White earned many awards, thus adding to North's achievements.

Bursting with enthusiasm, Redskins faithfully supported projects and activities, thereby carrying North's image into the community.

Following the completion of a school day, a semester, or a full three years, Redskins continued to recall their time and effort spent "for her honor and her glory."

Our dear old North Side High
Stands majestic by the stream.
She's the pride of every student
And the ideal of his dream.
In her halls are fondest
memories
Of the golden days of spring.
She's our love, our Alma Mater
And for her our praises ring.

Our dear old North Side High
Stands for service, truth and light.
For her honor and her glory
We will wear the red and white.
In her halls are fondest
memories
Of the golden days of spring.
She's our love, our Alma Mater
And for her our praises ring.

Before the speeches for each candidate, students campaigned through the auditorium, displaying banners, signs and posters for each of the three presidential candidates.

Stand-ins for Nixon, Humphrey, and Wallace gave campaign speeches and directed political rallys, hoping to gain student votes on Nov. 8.

Mock election results pointed to nation's choice

Realizing the significance of the presidential election year, Skins campaigned with banners, hats, and a human-size elephant during the week of the mock election. Reactions ranged from jeers to applause as the candidates, each represented by two students, related their platforms to the audience. Following the campaign speeches, questions from the floor aroused some debate between representatives, who answered with hesitations. Student voters desclosed their belief that "Nixon's the One." GOP ballots topped all others.

Redskins, like their parents, voted for officials on election day. Students voted in social studies classes, officially registering and being inspected by election officials.

Marge Cunningham as jolly Old St. Nick in the Christmas assembly has a lap full of her energetic fan Pete Percival, who has a very long list of presents for Santa to bring him.

'Skins' scope broadened by varied groups

A variety of scheduled assemblies were offered to Redskins throughout the year. Special choral programs highlighted sophomore arts, Thanksgiving, and safety assembly, while the Christmas season called for a less-serious program, which included a Santa skit. Individual classes met to elect officers and to be informed of class activities, while the speech and honors assemblies provided winners with recognition.

The I.U. Regional Campus Singers perform for a sophomore arts assembly, which was designed to increase the students' knowledge, interest, and appreciation of music.

Choir, orchestra and band put on four annual concerts. At the fall concert student teacher Mr. Platte performs, accompanied by A Cappella.

Seniors, Juniors shared trophy following spirit

North Side's Indian, Dave York, rouses the Redskins with his high spirited war dance, assisted by the Arrowettes and Color Guard. Dave's ceremonial dance preceeded each home game.

Bob Bossard prepares the bonfire at the Pep Rally. Redskins will burn the Snider Panthers as a hopeful symbol of a North Side victory.

1-2-3-4 was chorused by the senior girls' football team at the warm-up before the Powder Puff game. Mille Moser made the touchdown which gave the seniors a 7-0 victory.

week, highlighted by powder-puff game, pep rally

Juniors sparked the Redskin spirit in their own way by dressing as Indians, carrying signs, and pulling wagons, thus showing their Junior spirit.

Their walls ablaze with posters proclaiming "Beat the pants off the Panthers," "Senior Power," and "Pulverize Panthers," the halls once again revealed Redskin enthusiasm during spirit week. In addition to posters, "Whomp Snider" buttons prevailed on many a shirt, sweater, and purse. On the night of the pep rally, senior girls were again victorious in the powder puff game. Boasting a '69 float, seniors disclosed their reasons for flower-making earlier in the week. Juniors rallied with a painted truck, which honked its way past the bleachers. As a finale, sophomores staged a beauty contest among costumed boys from their class. In conclusion to the week, the spirit trophy was awarded to both the seniors and juniors, following some confusion as to who had accumulated the most points.

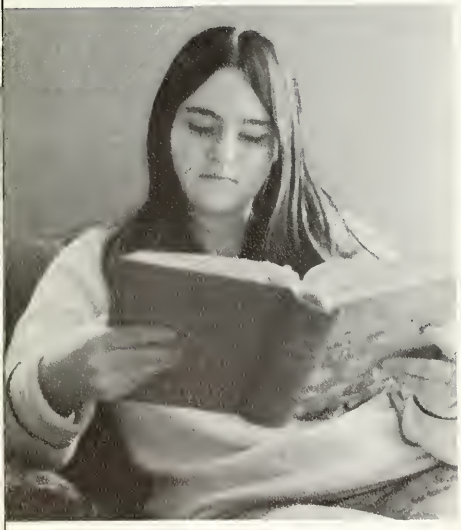
Senior class president Millie Moser shows off the spirit trophy after the winner was announced by spirit chairman Gary Parkerson.

Backed by the North Side banner, Sue Shoup and Debbie Fiandt spell out "North Side Redskins" in the cheer, "beat em Redskins, beat em," as they open the pep session.

Richard Parker returns to school, following months spent recuperating from injuries received in a motorcycle accident.

Homebound student Judy Stall uses a phone hook-up to communicate with her class at North. Judy had a spinal operation and was unable to attend school for about 23 weeks.

Phone hook-ups, tutors aided homebound students

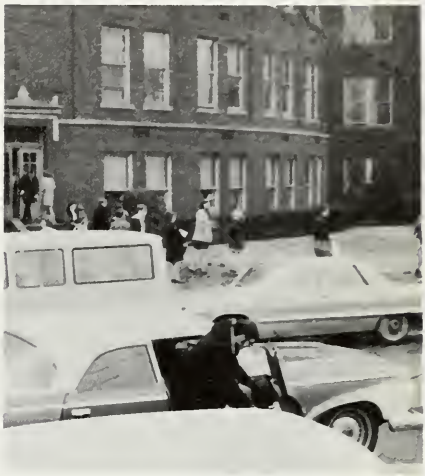


Marie Hall sticks to her studies, even though she is confined to her home with a broken foot. A tutor assisted her regularly.

Spending months in bed in a body cast was the result of an effort for the football team for Ed Newhard. He received a broken leg during a practice session.

Trudging up and down the many stairwells was a part of every North Sider's life. Since few students had consecutive classes on the same floor, much time was spent on the stairs.

The mad rush from school started early this year, as some seniors went home after fifth or sixth period, and lasted until the building was cleared at 3:25.



who missed out on congregating for daily gossip

Standing in line for nearly an hour and missing lunch to get a ticket for the Elmhurst and North game wasn't at all a bother for these students, since only a few tickets were available.

While some students roamed the quiet halls before and after classes, most became accustomed to being hurried along a crowded corridor or attempting to make their way up a down staircase between periods. Several 'Skins missed out on the snatches of conversation, ranging from the score of the most recent basketball game to gossip concerning someone's latest date. These homebound students spent several months away from school because of accidents or illnesses which made them incapable of attending classes. However, their education continued unaltered, with phone hook-ups and private tutors substituting for regular teachers.

Pep session for state win aroused spirit

A standing ovation welcomed members of the cross country, following their capturing of a state championship trophy. Representing the nine city high schools and New Haven, varsity cheerleaders congratulated the harriers by performing various cheers before an audience which included parents, coaches from near-by junior highs, Mr. Clarence Biedenweg, and Mr. Lester Grile, as well as enthusiastic Redskins. Coach Rowe introduced the team members one by one, commenting on their performances throughout the season, prior to their being presented with individual plaques by the Student Council.

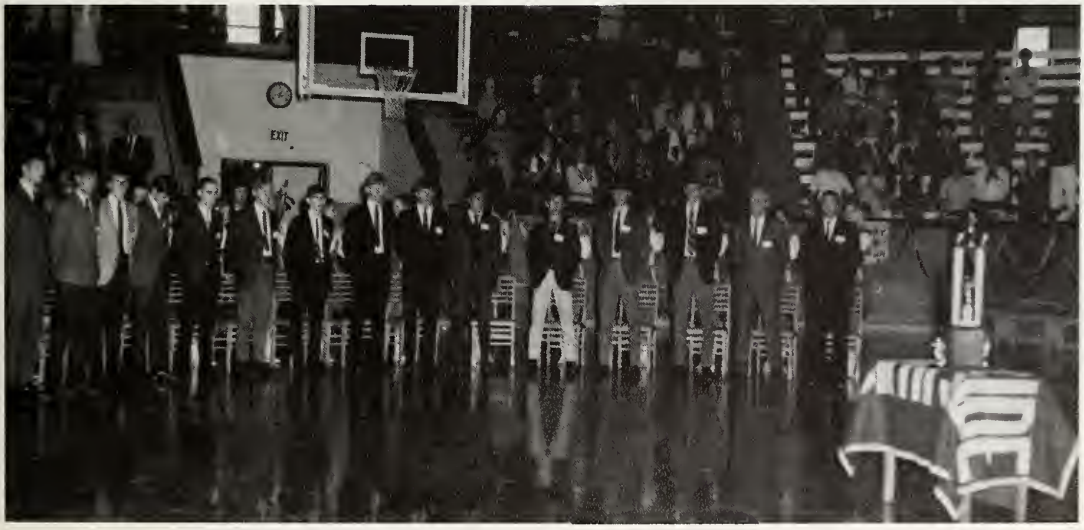
To honor North on their state cross country victory, cheerleaders from all the Fort Wayne area high schools bring congratulations as each squad performs a cheer.

Distinguished guests help to honor the cross country team. Coach Rowe introduces Tom Blakley who was voted "most valuable team member."

The harriers study their "State Cross Country Champions" plaques, which were presented by the Student Council at the pep session.

proudly salute the victorious runners, e Pom Pom girls give a special perform-ce around the newly-won trophy.

Tom Blakely holds the sign "You're number one" which the cross country team received from the cheerleaders of New Haven High School after their victory at state.



"We are the best" is the cry as the state cross country team gets a standing ovation.

DAR recipients Scott Kissinger, Millie Moser, Sue Shoup, and Bob Bossard are recognized for outstanding leadership and citizenship by the student body and the administration.

Honor, glory bestowed upon high achievers

Four National Merit semi-finalists brought honor and glory to North, as they were named among 15,000 of the country's most intellectually able high school seniors from results of the qualifying test.

DAR citizenship recipients were selected on basis of dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism. Seniors voted for their choice for the winners, whose names were submitted to the faculty for the final decision.

The science department boasted two additional achievers, Don Sherman and Don Shumaker, who received 100 dollar Heart Association grants for work on an advanced project.

Seniors Don Sherman and Don Shumaker display their advanced science project for which they received a grant from the Heart Association.

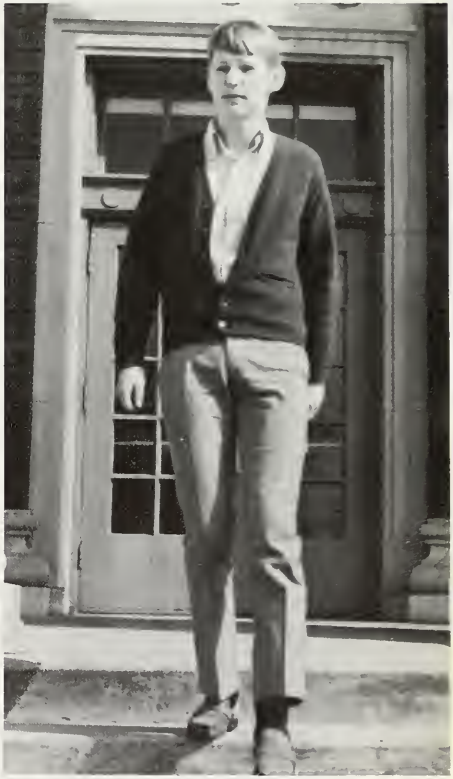
National Merit Semi-finalists, Barb Lotter, Craig Hoffman, Kevin Williams and Betsy Hein, rated among 15,000 highest scorers on the qualifying test, given in February of 1968.

Maki, Mats shared in traditional Domeland rites

Even though basketball isn't a national sport in Sweden or Japan, Mats and Maki find themselves caught up in the spirit and enthusiasm of a good old American basketball game.

Maki Kawasoe and Mats Ehn, foreign exchange students, became accustomed to the Redskin way of life as they cheered at ball games, participated actively in the senior banquet, and roamed the halls of Domeland. In addition to bringing their Japanese and Swedish traditions to Fort Wayne and the U.S., they found themselves returning to their native lands with bits of American custom, which they acquired during their stay.

Mats Ehn, foreign exchange student from Sweden, steps from his Domeland environment into a strange, new world of American customs.



Maki's singing talents provide entertainment for concerts and the Senior Banquet. He spends first period practicing with his fellow tenors Bruce Turner, Ken Jackson, and Doug Walker.

During a recent Varsity Varieties rehearsal, the sultan, Fred Leach, orders guards Tom Hyder and John Blair to remove and behead the prisoner, Steve Rice.

During Varsity Varieties, senior Sally Flint qualifies for a position after changing her act from the sobering "Down, Down with Rum" to a more swinging number.

Varsity Varieties, senior play attracted crowds

Varsity Varieties centered around a "Show Biz Thru the Years" theme, including highlights of the American theater throughout the years. Acts ranged from the colonial "First Flag" to a version of the modern musical, "Hair." Predicting the future, several actors participated in a "Lunar Adventure," which forecast show business of 1990.

"Li'l Abner," the senior play, concentrated on the capture of Abner by Daisy Mae and on the success of the Dogpatchers in saving their town from the fate of being used as an atom bomb test site. Highlighting the play, the traditional Sadie Hawkins Day race featured special lighting effects, which added to the authenticity of the scene.

Hours of practice were involved for the perfection of the annual Varsity Varieties. Here John Blair, Tom Hyder, Paul Markey, Rick Schwab, and Fred Leach rehearse.

Li'l Abner, Pete Percival, appears to seem unhappy about the prospect of marrying Daisy Mae, Debbie Richards, in a scene from the senior play.

These irritated wives give the professor, Fred Leach, a Hard Time, after he made their husbands unlovable like Li'l Abner.

A town meeting was called to find something necessary so the citizens of Dogpatch would not have to leave their homes. In the background is a statue of Jubilation C. Cornpone.

for her honor and her glory

FRIENDS

Students and faculty members formed a deep friendship through their combined efforts on many activities during the year.

Starting at 8:10 a.m. teachers gave their prepared lessons and students settled down to concentrate on their studies. During the five minute passing periods students spread the latest gossip while teachers took a break as they waited for their next class. When the 3:30 bell rang many students clamored through the doors, although others remained to attend club meetings or to plan and work on class projects. Teachers also stayed to act as club sponsors or to finish last minute details in order to be prepared for the next day of teaching.

Senior class officers are Millie Moser, pres.; Doug Friend, v-pres.; Sue Shoup, sec-treas.; and Katie Morris, soc. chair.

As sophomores, the class of 1969 entered divided

Senior Linda Sanders seems to be having some difficulty expressing her idea of "senior power" to sophomore Bill Bickham.

Miss Elizabeth Little, senior sponsor, explains to senior senators Mary Wert and Mark Holmes about the change in the date of their prom from June to April.

Assisted by newly-elected class officers, members of the class of '69 forgot their fears as sophomores and started a new tradition, the sophomore breakfast; set voting records; sold class pins; concluded the year with their sophomore party, "May Happening."

As juniors, they won the girls' football game and the spirit trophy, later selling T-shirts and suckers. Storybook characters enhanced their prom, "Once Upon a Time."

In their final year, the senior class again celebrated victory after the powder puff game, sharing the spirit trophy with the juniors. "Lil Abner," the senior play, carried on tradition. With a class vote, seniors changed the traditional senior banquet to the senior buffet and the prom to a formal dinner dance. Their years at North ended with recognition day and commencement exercises.

East meets West when exchange students, Masajuki Kawasoe from Japan and Mats Ehn from Sweden, discuss their new homes during a conversation at lunch.

Doug Friend and Bob Bossard lead the members of the class of 1969 through the senior door for the first time, as reverent sophomores kneel in respect.

During the social half-hour at the Senior Supper, Mary Wert and Marge Cunningham serve punch to seniors in the music-filled library.

Miss Little, senior sponsor, decorated her door with the activities and achievements of members of the senior class.

69'ers reminisced past years at senior banquet;

Members of the Class of 1969 upheld tradition at their Senior Supper, which took place in the softly lighted, flower-laden cafeteria. Remeniscing past experiences, seniors on the program recalled events of the sophomore and junior years. Exchange students Maki Kawasoe and Mats Ehm revealed differences in the school systems and dating customs of Japan, Sweden, and the United States, prior to Miss Little's good-luck speech.

Traditionally, seniors participated in the canoe race against Concordia, one of their final responsibilities as Redskins.

Marge Cunningham and Pat Taylor listen to exchange student, Mats Ehn, give his speech on the differences between Swedish and American schools.

Discussing their good and bad experiences in their past years at North, members of the class of '69' mingle with guests at the Senior Supper.

Masayuki Kawasoe discussed the differences between Japanese, Swedish, and American schools at the Senior Supper.

paddled way to finish line in annual canoe race

The annual canoe race between North and their up-river rivals from Concordia revealed school spirit as Redskins cheered their paddlers on to the finish line at the bridge.

"To go or not to go," is the question pondered by Sue Stone as Mark Helmke pleads with her to accept his invitation to the junior prom.

Junior class officers are president, Phil Gross; vice-president, Doug Brown; secretary-treasurer, Sue Stone; and social chairman, Marianne Blue.

Juniors, 611 strong, looked forward to their

The energetic junior class started the year with a bang by tying the seniors for the spirit trophy, prior to selling class pins, the first of many projects the class of '70 planned for the year.

The halls soon became a maze of signs and posters predicting the future officers, Phil Gross, president; Doug Brown, vice-president; Sue Stone, secretary-treasurer, and Marianne Blue, social chairman, who began working immediately on preparations for the junior prom. With the help of the class sponsors, the juniors prepared the class for the years to come.

Those students who don't walk to school wait afterwards for their bus. Most students, as shown here, talk with their friends.

Casino '70, the junior class booth at the school carnival, awarded roses to those who were lucky on the roulette wheel.

second year of planning and working as a unit

Before school the students get together to discuss the local gossip. Juniors Nancy Wentz and Miles Clifton are no exceptions.

With midterm approaching, Deb Richey, Karen Oser, and Rich Yost are buried in studies, deciding it's finally time to crack the books.

Mr. Timler and junior Cathy Thompson discuss plans for the junior trip, which included visits to New York and Washington D.C. by plane.

Sophomores admire trophies and awards won by previous Redskins as they try to visualize tournament competition.

The first day in Domeland proves to be a frightening experience for sophomores Kenny Spice as he pushes pennies.

New demands, experiences provided sophomores

Welcomed by upperclassmen as they entered Domeland for the first of many days, 627 highspirited sophomores started their high school careers. They displayed much of their school spirit by participating in spirit week and other school activities.

Through the guidance of the class advisors, sophomores began to adapt to the pattern of school life. For many, it was the beginning of new and exciting experiences. Striving to attain high standards, sophomores studied and participated in extra-curricular activities.

Sophomores dance and mingle in order to become better acquainted at the annual sophomore orientation dance.

The listening lab is an important part in the sophomore arts program as Ron Farlow proves by listening to the selection.

with challenging responsibilities, greater problems

Opening lockers posed quite a problem for sophomore Fred Burkhalter, who grapples with a stubborn lock.

Mr. Fisher projects a lesson on a screen as part of the sophomore developmental reading course, which adds to students vocabulary as well as comprehension and speed skills.

Sports-minded sophomores, interested in an upcoming swim meet, check the athletic schedule for the correct time and place.

Entering school proves a big problem for sophomore Bill Hallford who carries a wide assortment of paraphenalia.

Dr. Anthis completes fifth year as "Big Chief" of 'Skin tribe

Relaxing behind his spacious desk, Dr. Anthis dwells on coming events in Redskin country. Peaceful moments like this are precious in his busy schedule.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis completed another year as the "Big Chief" of all Redskins, with all school activities revolving around him. Finishing his eleventh year at North and fifth as principal, his past positions at North were as guidance director, dean of boys, and assistant principal.

Having been named valedictorian of his senior class at Patoka High, Dr. Anthis was listed in "Who's Who in the Midwest" in 1967. He attended Indiana State University to receive his bachelor's and master's degrees, obtaining his doctor's degree in 1962 at Indiana University.

A life member of the state PTA, Dr. Anthis belongs to community organizations, including American Legion, Forest Park Methodist Church, Masonic Lodge, Scottish Rite, and Rotary.

Dr. Anthis' many duties include broadcasting important announcements over the public address system during classes.

Mrs. Mary Shutt finds that the help of service worker, Darilyn Dickelman, makes her work as secretary to Dr. Anthis go much more rapidly.

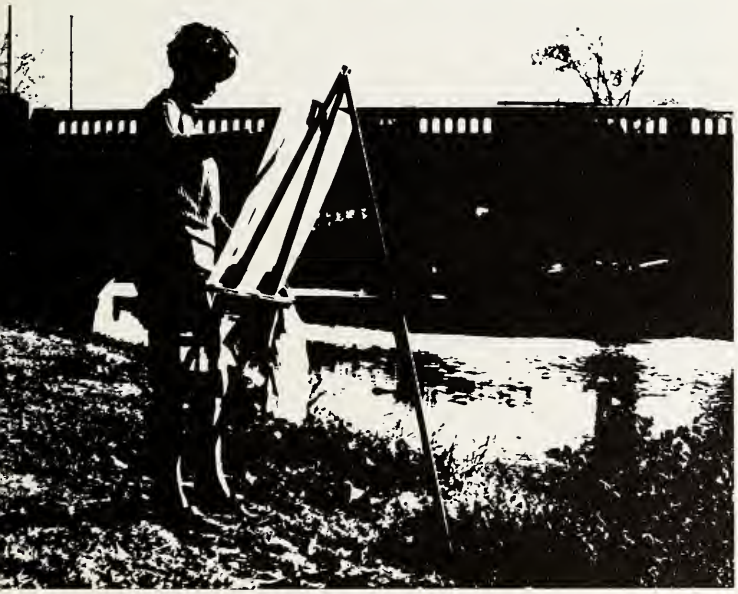
for her honor and her glory

ACADEMICS

For her honor and her glory, Redskins excelled academically, taking advantage of new equipment and more modernized techniques. Highlighting the election year, social studies classes participated in a mock election, predicting correctly that Nixon would be The One. A new approach to the teaching of sociology enabled students to apply their knowledge to present situations. With the aid of the newly-installed language lab, instructors emphasized speech over grammar. Knowledge gained in diversified fields provided students with the background necessary for future vocational and occupational opportunities. All in all, the academic year was improved with changes in the traditional curriculum.



Head of the English department Miss Elizabeth Little explains to seniors Bill Wehrenberg and Eddie Lou Meisner how to analyze short stories through characterization, setting, and plot.

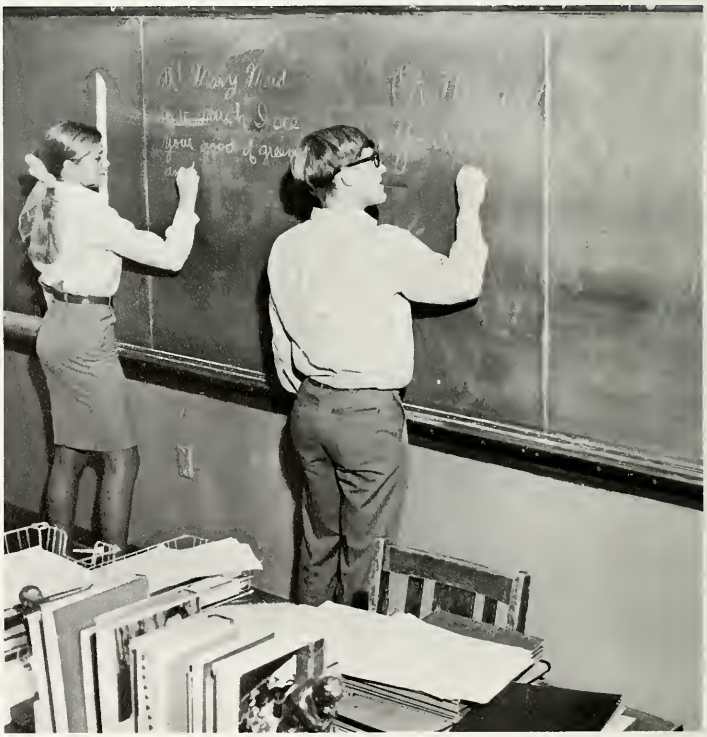
English classes combined a study of grammar, lit

Changes in the English Department included new texts and vocabulary records, five sets of supplementary paperbacks, the film "The Cherry Orchard," and five new teachers.

Amid delving into "The Yearling," "Julius Caesar," "To Kill a Mockingbird," "My Antonia," and "The Oxbow Incident," sophs shared a correlation of literature and composition with juniors through emphasis on paragraph writing. Occupied with time-consuming term papers, juniors also studied "Macbeth."

As underclassmen met book report requirements, seniors wrote critical analyses on works of 20th century authors and studied Greek tragedies and "Death of a Salesman."

In English seminar, five seniors combined a study of literature and creative writing, in addition to completing assignments made in regular English classes.



Juniors Debbie Amburn and Joe Fremion energetically display their knowledge in changing modern English to Anglo Saxon English, which is written in iambic or dactylic tetrameter.

Betsey Olofson states her views and gives suggestions to other members of the literature seminar, taught by Mr. James Lewinski.

Junior Linda Headford explores the library shelves while trying to find an interesting novel by a modern English author for one of six upcoming book report deadlines.

With the desk piled high with books, junior Kathy House settles down in a quiet corner of the library to work on her term paper.

Ken Rash, Carol Gaskill, and Terry DeWitt, junior English students of Mr. Gary Schultz, give their protrayal of William Shakespeare's famous love play, "Romeo and Juliet" using props and costumes.

Students developed poise, skill in speech, drama

Mr. John Heath's period two students imitate his every gesture in an attempt to become more expressive when they are faced with individual speech-making for contests and classes.

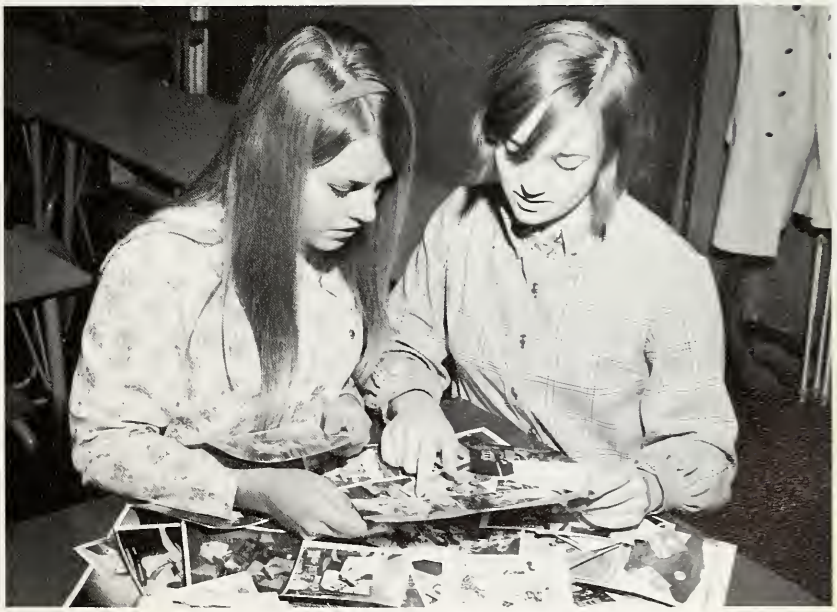
The journalism department has acquired many new teaching devices. Miss Unowicz, student teacher, demonstrates the overhead projector.

While beginning journalists studied mass media and put gathered facts into usable form, advanced students further developed these skills, learning to write with more variety, to think through problems, and to assume responsibility for deadlines. Gaining experience in these classes, students having interest and ability began writing for the Northerner or Legend.

Devices added to the department this year included an overhead projector, a movie screen and two film strips.

Journalists learned to organize facts, information

Judy Nomina, assistant editor of the Legend, checks over copy for typographical errors before submitting a final draft.

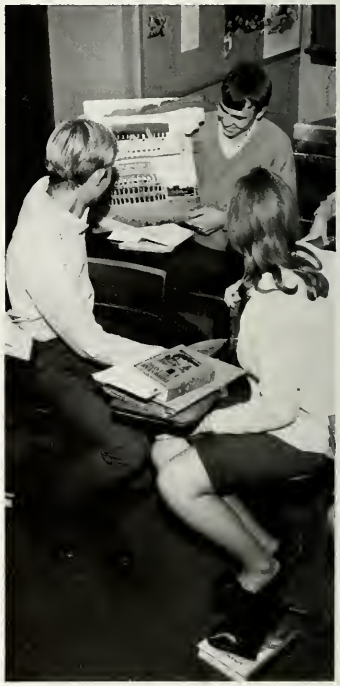


Sandy Westerhausen and Beth Hayes sort through a stack of Northerner pictures, deciding which of them will be used in the coming issue of the newspaper. Pictures are chosen by the section editors.

Foreign language classes adapted new programs

The new portable lab, assembled mistakenly in Mrs. Weber's room, aids Mr. Lemke in teaching a class of Spanish students how to skillfully speak and understand the language.

These senior students in Mrs. Ransburg's fourth year French class use tapes, maps, magazines, and textbooks in their study of the language and culture of the French people.



Rich Yost, Reid Nelson, and Pat Yant enjoy study prints of the Colosseum which show the ruin today and during the Roman Empire.

as modern lab aided students

Addition of a portable lab added increased flexibility for the foreign language department by allowing the teacher to use regular classroom procedure or the laboratory facilities at will. The audio-lingual program, adopted by both the French and Spanish classes, taught students speech and comprehension of the language prior to writing.

Coordinated books and tapes enabled Latin students to learn the language more thoroughly by means of a more modern approach.

Individual participation adds variety to classroom education. Bill Wehrenberg, one of Mr. Lemke's fourth year Spanish students, illustrates this with a souvenir from Peru.

Senior Dave White reveals his knowledge of the German rules of grammar and punctuation by writing the proper form for a correct business letter heading on the board.

Spanish students, senior Bill Blosser and sophomore Cheryl Lees, examine tapes and films used in the audio-lingual approach, which is relatively new to the language department.

Sociology class, with group participation in the form of panel discussions, provides a means for students to express views and opinions as well as to hear ideas of others.

Social Studies Department revealed man's future—

Junior Mark Galbraith reviews current periodicals which are very important to the U.S. History course. Mr. Fleck relates a new story to the geographical point of view.

Eleven social studies instructors assisted 1,455 students in their search for the key to tomorrow, by association of the past with the present.

Required subjects, U.S. History and government, gave the background of the country and illustrated the functions of her government.

Used in teaching these courses were periodicals, city newspapers, maps, globes, library materials, and audio-visual aids which gave students greater insight into current events.

ever changing

In economics class, seniors Cindy Mink and Anita Petty follow the common fluctuations of the stock market.

Junior U.S. History students Mats Ehn, Bruce Keever, Bette Dodd, and Beth Ann Robnolte examine carefully a reproduction of the Declaration of Independence displayed in class.

Math, science emphasize exactness, reasoning, experimenting

Beth Hayes and Roger Hobbs cooperate as they begin dissection of a frog in biology, the study of plant and animal life. Dissection is only one important aspect of the subject.

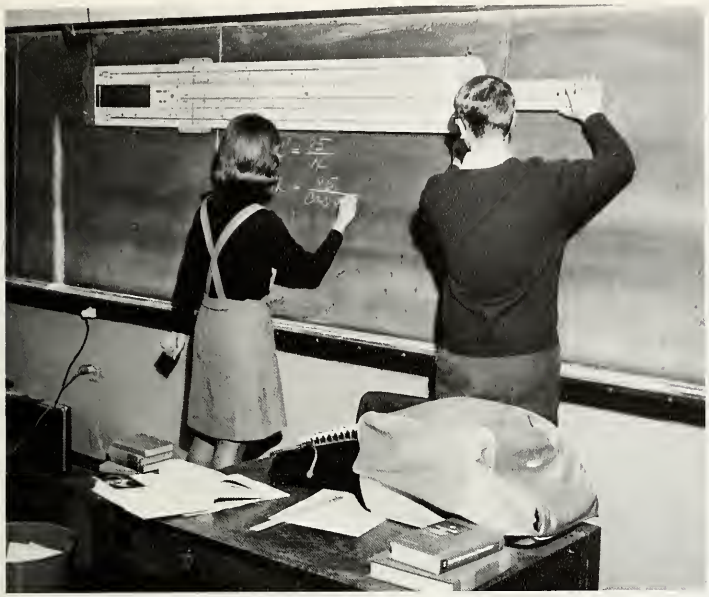
Through a new, more exploratory curriculum, 700 Redskins taking biology, chemistry, earth science, or physics spent two periods weekly in lab correlating lectures and demonstrations by their teachers. Advanced science pupils completed special projects and planned careers.

Math students developed skills such as drawing and reasoning in their efforts to reach exactness. Sophomores took elementary algebra or geometry; upperclassmen were offered advanced algebra, senior math, trigonometry, analytic geometry, or fifth year math.

Mike Wetzel sights through the range finder to learn the measure for a given distance, demonstrating a typical physics lab procedure, while Cheryl Bracht and Joy Swogger record.

Marsha Harsch and Doug Hall study a map used in Mr. Tipple's earth science classes, noting topography.

By using a giant slide rule, advanced math students Anita Petty and Gerry Rich develop methods of solving mathematical equations with greater ease, speed, and accuracy.

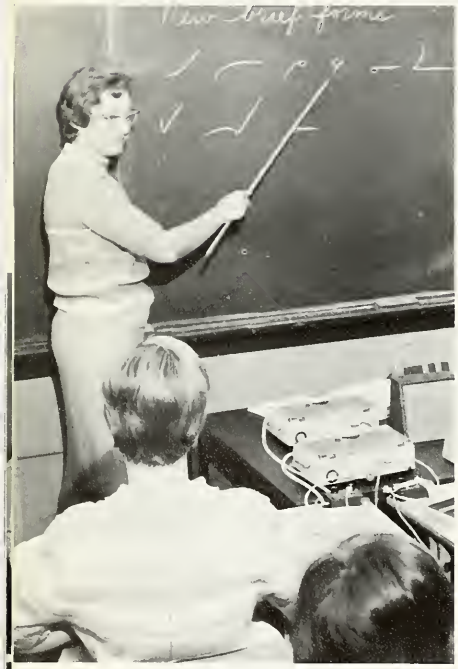


Senior Greg Lewis and sophomore Teresa Bonifas work together in bisecting a geometric angle, using a step-by-step problem-solving method taught in Mr. Bickel's geometry class.

Tom Mensch, sophomore, seems confused at the door of Mr. Hey's mathematics classroom, formerly an exercise room.

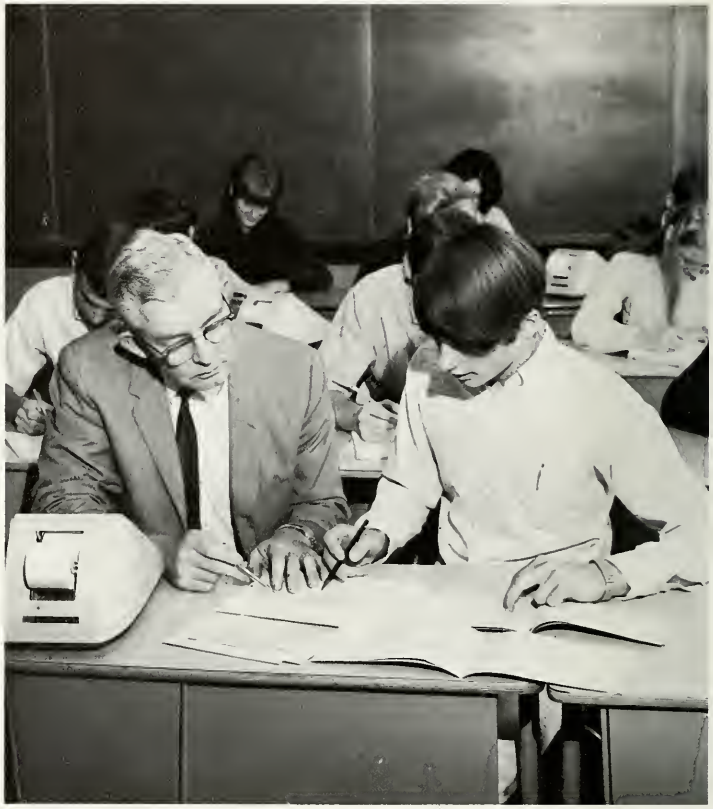
Knowledge, application of typing, shorthand skills

The Business Department offered general business, bookkeeping, typing, shorthand, and business law. Distributive education, available to juniors and seniors, enabled the students to apply their knowledge to business situations through actual work experience. While general business students covered basic fundamentals, those in business law dealt with the legal aspects of business management. Selling taught students methods of marketing, advertising, and displaying merchandise.



Mrs. Johnson, standing at the blackboard, reviews shorthand symbols with students who plan to further their careers in business.

Mr. John Walter, head of the business department, advises senior Tom Houck on proper use of a practice set containing pertinent problems in his advanced bookkeeping class.



Mrs. Ashe's clerical practice classes help students in their future careers with experience in handling such machines as this dictaphone, used by senior Joy Peirce.

helped business students in planning for careers

In Mr. Rowe's beginning typing class, Amy Smith prepares for a timed writing to help increase speed and accuracy.

Mary Lasley, one of the many students who works in the service center, often uses this newly installed electronic calculator, which compiles figures for the treasurer's office.

Judy Grider experiments with an adding machine, which students use in bookkeeping and clerical practice for comparing their own answers to those achieved through use of the machines.

Dramatists, artists exhibited skillfulness in plays;

As his drama class looks on, senior Dave Cashdollar demonstrates the effective presentation of a moving scene, which is an every-day part of Mr. Purkhiser's classes.

Debbie Richard receives approval of Mike Tully as she makes sure her costume is just right for a part she has in a play.

with sketches, silk screening

The Dramatics Department offered courses in stagecraft, beginning drama, and advanced drama. Prerequisites upon entering the field included theater, music, and a general background of the essentials of drama. Students took beginning and advanced drama in sequence. No experience was required for stagecraft, which acquaints people with all stages of production.

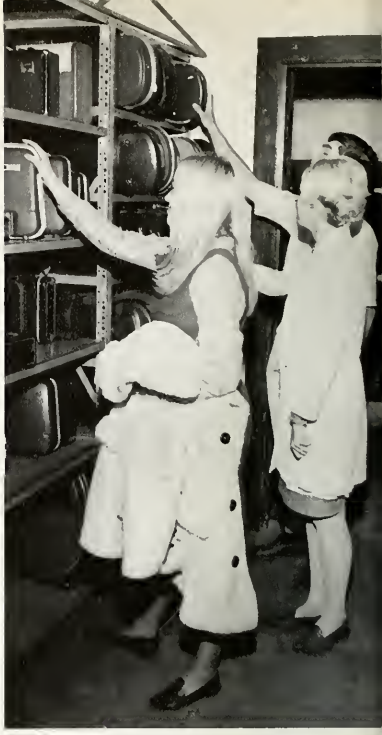
Students involved in the art program learned many skills and techniques while beginning art students developed skills in the fundamental elements of art, including line, form, and shape. Intermediate classes became more involved in making their works resemble more closely the subject from which they were drawn, inked, or sketched. Learning how to copy works in large numbers, advanced students employed methods involving the lithographs, silkscreens, and linoleum tile blocks.

Miss Bell, head of the Art Department, instructs junior Linda Getts as to the correct procedure for finishing her hand-woven project on the loom, another aspect of advanced art.

Larry Dague takes enameled jewelry from the kiln, which is frequently used for hardening and baking of normally soft materials. Clay is also baked as a step in ceramics.

Chris Pape shapes a piece of metal for a ring by using a vise-grip, one of the many types of tools found in the department.

A Cappella Choir sopranos Sue Smead, Ann Ziege, Betsey Wilson and Debby Edwards concentrate on hitting the correct notes as they follow their sheet music during practice.



Redskin band members Keith Hughes, Annette Bocik, and Vicky Mills stuff their instruments into crowded quarters after every rehearsal.

Hurrying to beat the bell, Mike Mudrack and Lewie King return their instruments to their proper places following a lengthy band practice.

Instrumental, vocal groups co-ordinated sounds for concerts

Mr. Platte, student teacher for Mr. Holloway, directs Nancy Misselhorn, Vicki Phillips, Cheryl Renn, and Kevin Cismowski in a training choir warm-up session.

A Rodger's theater organ furnished by the "Z" Clubs topped a list of five other instruments added to the music department. Also added were a new recording system furnished by the Music Boosters and a slide projector.

Three training classes: training choir, varsity choir and training orchestra, prepare students for one of four advanced classes including A Cappella, Chanticleers, Orchestra, and Concert Band. The academic side of music was studied in the theory and literature. The sophomore arts program stressed greater appreciation for the fine arts, accenting painting and music.

Band members led by Mr. Ashton rehearse songs and practice routines daily in order to give perfected performances at football games and contests throughout the year.

Pupils trained for adulthood in home ec

The 250 girls in home economics choose courses in sewing, foods, nursing and child development, as well as in housing and home decoration. Boys who elected family living and management viewed dating, courtship, marriage, family life, and subjects related to the home. This section better acquainted students with situations they will face as future homemakers.

Preparation of food is an important part of home economics. Joyce Horner and Mel Brickley are beginning to lay out a meal for a demonstration.

As Mrs. Crocker demonstrates, there appears to be more to pinning a dress pattern than meets the eye. Before a finished product is reached, cutting, sewing, and fitting must be completed.

Before beginning to sew, one must understand the operation of a machine. Vicky Cates demonstrates her knowledge on a project.

Industrial arts skill courses attracted 500

Ten courses in industrial arts were available to approximately 500 students in the department who elected either beginning or advanced classes in woods, metals, power mechanics, drawing, or electricity, studying everything from cabinetry to engine repair. A new electronics course emphasized a study of the parts and operation of electric appliances for practical application in the home.

Senior Bill Atkinson, wearing goggles as a safety precaution, exhibits his skill in use of industrial arts machinery as he works on a wood project in Mr. Edwards' shop class.

Fred Griffith, a student in metals, uses the acetylene tourch to weld a seam on a piece of metal. Willy Zurbrugg looks on.

Pat Taylor sands a table in preparation for varnishing. Tables, cabinets, and shelves were among the projects constructed by students in the beginning and advanced woods classes.

Girls' physical education provided variety of skills

Junior Nancy Gaunt correctly straddles the horse, following a running start. This stunt is one of the more advanced feats of the gymnastics' classes, instructed by Mrs. Beer.

Miss Kathleen Sparks demonstrates the fundamental free-style stroke to her intermediate swimming class while the participants listen carefully, imitating her every motion.

Sophomore boys acquired basic skills in athletics

Girls' physical education offered experiences in athletic and social activities. The waltz and polka were highlights of folk dance, while swimmers developed skills in intermediate groups. Basics were stressed in individual sports, including badminton, archery, tumbling, bowling, and gymnastics, which involved use of the balance beam, side horse, and parallel bars.

Boys in physical education were taught the fundamentals of many sports. Achievement tests, which consisted of push-ups, chin ups, sit ups, and running events, and certain gymnastic exercises were required for one year. An overall view of sports developed regard for their health and well-being.

Keith Johns and Jay Frazier attempt to bring down Freddy Hamilton as he tries for extra yardage during a touch football game.

Rick Summers, O. B. Caude, and Ron Bricker await their turn at bat as Brian Gore and coach Will Doehrman, watch Fred Burkhalter give the ball a whack for a base hit.

Mr. Hyrle Ivy explains job placements to his students in ICT, a course set up to train them for futures in the industrial field.

Distributive education paved way to better jobs

The ICT-sponsored car smash attracted quite a crowd, including Mark Winters and Bob Shaffer, who display their strength during half time of the North-Snider game.

Seniors Bruce Choka and Linda Hopper exhibit their skills in displaying merchandise, as training in business procedure.

Bree Borders, representing the seniors in DECA, presents a multi-purpose bulletin board to Dr. Anthis at a pep session.

and learning

Giving instruction on the job as well as in school was the purpose of distributive education.

The DE program included DECA, which involved occupations in the fields of retailing and marketing; ICT, which provided skilled labor training; and BOE, which concerned business office education.

Students participating in the DE program also took part in outside activities, including a calendar towel sale, leadership conferences, the regional activities contest, and the employer-employee banquet honoring the employers of DE members.

Working dilligently at her typing, this student realizes the effort that must go into BOE, the branch of DECA which enables the student to develop skills in one field.

Observed by his class of BOE students, Mr. Don Hamm demonstrates the techniques of inserting a carbon copy into a duplicator for production of a quantity of pages.

ORGANIZATIONS

More than thirty organizations activated Domeland after the academic day. Redskins demonstrated both interest and skill through their participation in extra-curricular activities. Clubs dealt with service, common interests, achievements of futures in certain fields. Service club members combined efforts to help the community, school and student body. During half hour meetings, students gained new information about their interests or future goals through special speakers and slides. The clubs sponsored after-game dances, booths at the carnival and other money-making projects. All organizations correlated facts and entertainment to provide interesting after-school programs.

Student Council governed through administration,

Student Council officers are president, Scott Kissinger; secretary, Jamie Wise; treasurer, Greg Adams; vice-president, Bill Cowan.

Student Council, under the direction of Mr. James Lewinski and Miss Ruth Eudaley, assisted in the management of the school.

Officers were president, Scott Kissinger; vice-president, Bill Cowan; secretary, Jamie Wise; and treasurer, Greg Adams.

Sara Kolin headed the standing committee, which organized the Christmas Bureau and Viet Nam projects, as well as the election of representatives and officers. The school problems committee, led by Bob Bossard, sponsored the book store, while Gary Parkerson's spirit committee directed spirit week and promoted school spirit for athletic events. The cultural arts committee, led by Betsey Olofson, took charge of American Education Week and the bulletin boards.

Holding the parliamentary procedure clinic as well as organizing the dress code and mock election were the duties performed by the citizenship committee led by Mark Helmke.

A high school branch of the international organization of Zonta, a women's professional organization, Z-club, under the direction of Mrs. Waterfield, Miss Bonneff, and Mrs. Hutmacher, offered its services to the community and school by ushering for the Philharmonic and children's symphonies, as well as by selling corsages at sectional time to boost the team, thus carrying out their "growth through service" motto.

Dogpatch was the style for the annual Sadie Hawkins girl-ask-boy dance, sponsored by Z-Club. Selling donuts and milk to early arrivals and arranging for Valentine greeting cards being sent to friends, the members provided service for the school. Club members sponsored money-making projects such as bake sales, the all-school carnival, and a sucker sale in saving toward purchase of an organ.

Sue Stone, Debbie Jones, Karen Bloom, and Pam Mills admire the new organ purchased by the Z-Clubs and donated to the school for use at assemblies in the auditorium.

Parking cars at basketball games, transporting voters to the polls on election day, caroling during the holidays, painting bleachers for cheerblock, co-sponsoring the WOWO faculty basketball game and sponsoring paper drives kept Key Club members busy.

Key Club, a service organization organized to benefit the school, church and community, formed three different clubs sponsored by Northeast Kiwanis. Presidents Gary Parkerson, Paul Wilson, and Bob Bossard carried out their duties under the supervision of their respective sponsors, Mr. Steven Timler, Mr. Donald Hamm, and Mr. Ronald Certain.

New members of Key Club obtained applications from one of the club presidents or advisers. If approved, the member-elect participated during a probation period, after which members of his club voted as to whether or not he would become an active member of their Key Club.

Key Club members regularly parked cars at home basketball and football games, as junior Pat Falvy illustrates by pointing out an available parking space for an opposing team's bus.

Taking pictures, writing captions, fitting headlines

Sue Cook collects money from homeroom agent Reid Nelson during the Legend campaign, in which students were encouraged to order yearbooks before the price went up.

Carol Maley and Brenda Brothers sign up dates for pictures to be taken of various organizations and senior activities.

Bruce Earnest and Dave York sacrifice many hours taking pictures and developing them, making this year's Legend possible.

busied editors of '69 Legend

Members of the Legend staff were busy with interviewing, writing copy, setting up pictures, and meeting deadlines to compile a book filled with fond memories. Staff members were Cheryl Ormiston, editor-in-chief; Judy Nomina, assistant editor; Linda Headford, academics editor; assistant Sue Heuer; Claire Hayner, faculty editor; Carol Maley, organizations editor; assistants, Jenny Motz, Sue Francis, and Nancy Wentz; Brenda Brothers, senior editor; Karen Pickering, assistant; Paul Nailor, sports editor; Harry Francies, and Bob Kinsey, assistants; Amanda Lusk, underclass editor; Shannon Craft, and Jerri Kline, assistants; Holly Shook, index editor; LuAnne Johnson, assistant; Sue Cook, business manager; assistants, Ed Molthan, and Jerri Kline.

Cheryl Ormiston and Judy Nomina check the layouts seeing that all pictures, copy, cutlines, and headlines fit correctly before sending them to the printer.

Shannon Craft and Mandy Lusk number and alphabetize the die cuts of the underclass pictures, making sure that the names and pictures correspond in order.

Junior Holly Shook types a small portion of underclass names alphabetically, as they will appear in the final index of the Legend.

Northerner staff members beat weekly deadlines

Every week our publications department receives exchange papers. Nancy Gaunt and Judy Lotter are searching for new ideas.

Each week the Northerner staff members, advised by Miss Norma Thiele, busied themselves obtaining, writing, and editing school news. Each Wednesday, pictures, copy, and advertisements were arranged for each page and sent to the printers before distribution Friday.

First semester positions included; editor-in-chief, Christine Malich; managing editor, Scott Kissinger; news editor, Eddie Lou Meisner; assistant, Bette Dodd; feature editor, Becky Glock; assistants, Sue Stone and Sandy Jesse; sports editor, Bill Hogestyn; assistant, Carl Busian; advertising manager, Betsy Hein; assistants, Cindy Matter and Norma Shepelak; business manager, Annette Bocik; assistant, Chris Thornhill; cartoonist, Kevin Macy; and circulation manager, Judy Lotter.

Chris Malich, Becky Glock and Sandy Jesse place articles, pictures and captions in the order they will appear in the paper.

by interviewing, writing, editing

Betsy Hein, Cindy Matter and Annette Bocik check ads. Records are kept telling how long each ad will run, and the price.

Weekly, as papers arrive from the printers, Norma Shepelak begins folding them in preparation for distribution on Friday.

Eddie Lou Meisner, news editor, is giving Sue Skekloff and Bette Dodd their weekly assignments. Assignments are made every Monday and are due at the end of the week.

Quill and Scroll is an international honorary club open to seniors only. These students must be in the upper third of their class and have done superior work on the Northerner or Legend. Miss Thiele recommends students and sends samples of their work for approval. Quill and Scroll members plan the publications banquet and picnic.

1500 Club is open to Northerner staff members only. These students receive points for their work on the school paper. After a student has collected 1500 points, he is eligible for 1500 Club.

Quill and Scroll and 1500 Club members were announced January 15 at the publications banquet.

The newly organized Library Club provided social as well as educational experience for members who planned parties and invited guest speakers to their meetings.

The Library assistants became members of the club by working in the library, checking out and mending books and magazines, as well as returning them to their proper shelf positions.

National Thespians, an honorary club for students who have participated in dramatics, recognized students having outstanding interest in acting or in working backstage. They held an initiation banquet in the spring for installation of new members.

FTA members sponsored WOWO-faculty game, studied techniques of teaching

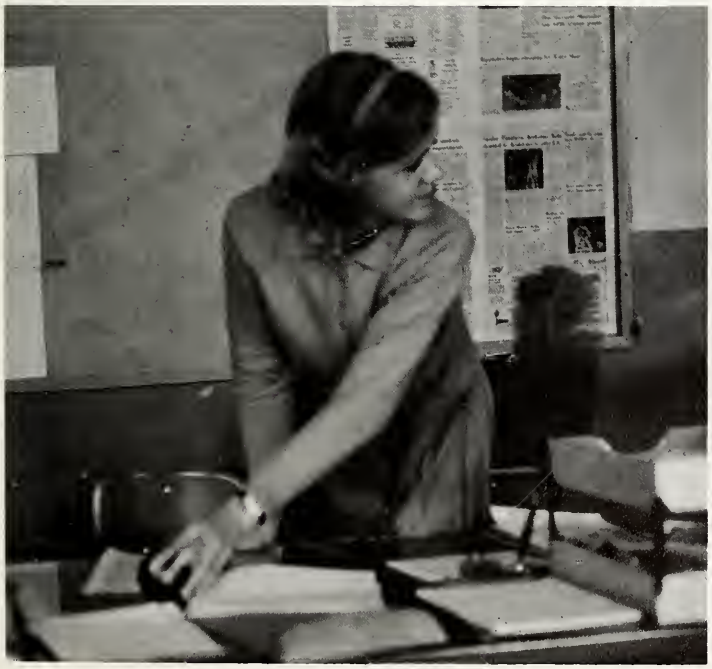
Representatives of FTA attend a board meeting to discuss plan for the WOWO Air Aces game and the possibility of caroling.

FTA, sponsored by Mr. Augustus Schoonover, familiarized members with the teaching profession.

Various activities included the ISTA and IFTA conventions, parents' night, and the induction of new members. FTA members also served as guides on back-to-school night.

Speakers at regular meetings discussed teaching music, languages, history, and elementary grades. A banquet honoring seniors at Hall's Gas House in May, concluded the year as officers for 1969-70 were installed.

Among the projects were selling sweatshirts in the fall, aiding the teachers during Teaching Career Month, and sponsoring the WOWO Air Aces-faculty basketball game in December.



In April, during Teaching Career Month, FTA members did good deeds for teachers. Linda Sieling was caught doing her good deed.

JCL, comprised of 96 students who have taken or are taking Latin, sponsored many activities throughout the year, a few of them being associated with MLC. These activities included a dance, a Christmas party, and a picnic in May. A high point of the May picnic was a volleyball game, which provided the two clubs with friendly competition. JCL added to the fall carnival by running the mini olympics.

The annual Roman Banquet, held in the cafeteria, served as a summary of the entire year. At this meeting, Senior members were honored by new members, who served as slaves. The students dressed in Roman costumes and typical Roman food was served.

MLC expanded members' knowledge of languages

MLC expanded its members' knowledge of foreign countries' languages, customs, and cultures by giving them insight as far as the lives of foreign peoples were concerned.

MLC collaborated with the Junior Classical League to provide members of both clubs with a Christmas party, as students swung madly at a candy-filled pinata and sang traditional carols in Spanish, French, German, and Russian.

MLC sponsored a jail booth at the carnival and, with JCL, hosted an after-game dance in the school cafeteria during the basketball season. MLC members feasted on hot dogs, baked beans, and potato salad during the year at two club-sponsored picnics away from school.

At the MLC Christmas party, Nanci Redman tries her luck at the pinata as other members look on.

Helicon stressed fine arts theme for enriching members' lives

Helicon members Pam Mertz, Greta Blackburn, Judy Nomina, Bob Bossard, and Jim Benecke rehearse for the Christmas play at the Allen County Home.

To enrich their lives in literature, Helicon members concentrated on a fine arts theme. Being an honorary club, Helicon required that senior and junior members maintain a B+ average in English. During second semester, sophomores with an A− average joined.

To start off the year, members feasted at a potluck dinner, prior to participating in the all-school carnival, hosting an after-game dance, and presenting the Washington and Lincoln Day assembly. Traditionally, Helicon sponsored a Christmas party at the Allen County Home and held their annual spring tea and senior farewell banquet.

Helicon again provided the English Cup Award to the outstanding English student of the year.

Members of the debate team, sponsored by Mr. Gary Schultz, attended meets at Logansport, Muncie, Elmhurst, New Haven, Indianapolis, Ball State University, and Indiana University. At Indiana State the team took third place, with Don Shumaker being named one of six outstanding debators. In January, North hosted a debate before the NFL congress held the sectional, regional, and state finals in March and April. Don Shumaker. Nevin Seeger, and Dave Bauer were the first members to receive recognition at meets.

The speech club members traveled to several schools, including Ball State and Indiana Universities. and visited most large cities in Indiana. Members of both groups gained experience in self expression.

Phy-Chem members worked on various projects

Phy-Chem, open to students successfully completing physics or chemistry or doing satisfactory work in either this year, acquainted students with the practical application of scientific principles.

During the year, speakers informed members about various topics, including science-related careers. In November, Phy-Chem sponsored the traditional trip to Chicago for the Advanced science students, who visited the Argonne National Laboratories. Later, senior members sponsored a booth in the school carnival, which included a science show, fortune telling, and the "monkey in the tree" experiment. As their money making project, Phy-Chem members sponsored an after game dance, "Fling to the Future."

Sponsors included Mr. Ronald Dvorak, Mr. Beryl Lewis, and Mr. Merle Rice.

Don Sherman, Ron Miller, and Dave Norris mix up another concoction in the Phy-Chem booth at the carnival sponsored by Z Club. The drinks they mixed tended to blow up.

Phy-Chem members are (front row) Bruce Hagen, John Desmond, Park Payne, Allan Knerr, Sue Johnston, Amy Smith, Gay McMaken, Tim Cooper, Jim Andrews. Globetrotters studied U.S., foreign lands

Aided by films, panels, and guest speakers, members of Globetrotters, a social studies club for students with a B— average in social studies courses, promoted peace and understanding of the members through study of the governments, customs, and backgrounds of foreign countries, as well as of the United States.

Globetrotters sponsored a Legislation Assembly at the Indiana-Purdue Regional Campus, the junior class trip to New York, and the Thanksgiving Day Assembly.

The club's fund-raising projects included a cake walk at the all-school carnival and an after-game dance.

Tri-M members learned through guest speakers

Tri-M, an honorary club, based its membership on selections of previous members, who sent invitations checked and approved by the sponsors, Mr. Willard Holloway and Mr. David Platt.

To enrich and broaden music interests of all kinds, special speakers and performers provided various programs for the meetings. The Tri-M group also took field trips and sponsored the spook house in the annual school carnival, held in the fall.

According to sponsor Mr. John DeYoung, students have been informing the area of public high school activities for four years. Members of Highliters met weekly to record school news, which was cast Monday evenings at 8:30 on WGL.

This year, North Side's exchange students, Maki Kawasoe from Japan and Mats Ehm from Sweden, were guests on the show.

Y Teen girls received Y W memberships

Y Teens affiliated with the YWCA, provided a variety of projects for girls from surrounding community schools. Members of Y Teens received automatic membership in the YWCA, giving the girls the opportunity to use its facilities.

Projects of the club included sponsoring a car wash, a party for a group of welfare children, and a grandfather at a local county home, whom they regularly visited.

Activities at their meetings ranged from passing out cans of fund-raising nuts to making bean bags for use at the YWCA. For their own pleasure, the girls of Y Teens staged a sleep-in party at one member's home.

Y Teen officers Brenda Rhodes and Barb Melvin hand out cans of mixed nuts to members, who sold them as a fund-raising project to profit the YWCA.

AV, Business Club benefitted school, members

Audio-Visual Club acquainted its members with the new equipment of the rapidly-growing department. As a service organization, A-V benefitted the school as well as the members of the club.

By operating projectors during their study halls, the members made it easier for teachers to take classes to see additional education programs.

Business Club familiarized members with the angles of the surrounding business world. It educated members through means of guest speakers and field trips. One of the club's functions was showing members what to look for in finding successful positions in jobs.

The Business Club made programs for special school functions. Selling felt-tip pens throughout the year enabled members to purchase their annual gift for the future business department.

Girl athletes co-ordinated work, skills

G.A.A. and Ripplettes each provided extracurricular physical education for girls.

Ripplettes, an honorary club, held tryouts for selection of new members who were chosen by Mrs. Lynn Beer, sponsor, and other Ripplette members on the basis of performed skills.

Ripplettes taught the girls discipline and helped them learn to work in co-operation with others as they performed for the Indiana State Teachers Association in October and in the annual water show during May.

G.A.A. members maintained a booth in the school carnival and worked with youngsters from the Fort Wayne children's home, while the organization provided recreational activities after school.

Color guard, twirlers did many routines

The Arrowettes, composed of seventeen twirlers and seven members of color guard under the direction of Mrs. Wagner and Mr. Ashton, performed with marching band on the field and in parades, as well as performing during half time to the music of the marching band.

With the band, the Arrowettes and color guard participated in the N.I.S.B.O.V.A. contest and attended summer band camp, marching during half time at Manchester College in November and for the Veterans' Day parade in downtown Fort Wayne.

The head twirlers who led the girls in their routines at school and away were Lynn Stemen and Jacque Stoy.

Two small dance bands, started and directed by Mr. Fredrick Autenreith, concentrated on jazz fundamentals.

Another dance band, the Wildsiders, got its name from the theme song, "Walk on the Wild Side," and was composed of selected players from the other two bands.

The Wildsiders, led by Mr. Ashton, participated in the N.I.S.B.O.V.A. contest, competing against thirty-five other bands in the area.

Like all the music organizations, the Wildsiders participated in the school concerts, also playing for several after-game dances, competing in a state-wide contest, and performing during tours of the junior high schools in the Fort Wayne area.

Varsity band, composed mainly of sophomores who performed with the concert band under the direction of Mr. Ashton, played at parades and football games.

After the completion of the fall marching season, varsity band members began to prepare for concert band, which consisted of selected seniors, juniors, and sophomores.

To help prepare them for the season, some marchers were sent to summer band camp, where they learned some of the fundamentals of performing.

Following tradition, marching band members again participated in the N.I.S.B.O.V.A. contest, competing with other bands in Indiana, and performed on Halloween for the students at the State School.

Aside from marching, the band members participated with other music groups in school concerts.

Training and varsity choir, under the direction of Mr. Holloway, Mr. Moser, and Mr. Harris, stressed fundamentals of vocal music and provided members with a chance to try out for Chanticleers, A'Cappella, and Troubadours.

Training choir met as a regular class, while varsity choir members practiced without credit in half hour study halls during fourth period lunch.

The orchestra, directed by Mr. David Platt, consisted of 63 members, who performed for the International Business College commencement, Lil' Abner, and the Manchester Spring Festival.

During the year, a new program, "Musical Performance, Knowledge, and Understanding," was initiated, devoting a seventh of class time to widening the musical dimensions of the students.

Performing for school and outside banquets, service clubs, concerts, and functions, Troubadors formed the traveling segment of the large choir for away concerts.

Nearly eighty voices, under the direction of Mr. Holloway, composed the A'Cappella choir, the school's largest performing choral group.

Aside from participation in the music department here at school, the group members gathered for a picnic in September, a banquet in March, and choir trips to St. Joe College and the junior highs.

for her honor and her glory

SPORTS

Inspired by the traditional Indian ceremonial which preceded each home basketball game, loyal Redskins backed their team throughout the season and tournament. As fans supressed shouts, a free throw semingly reversed its direction half-way through the net, causing a loss, which few have forgotten, to a tough opponent. In addition to turning out for basketball games, supporters cheered from under warm winter wraps during football season, later bringing out suntan lotions and dark glasses as sprinters hurried around the track. Backers of the cross country team were rewarded with the satisfaction of a state championship. Swimming, golf, tennis, and wrestling teams were improved overall.

Senior Roman Robles, 23, starts out of the backfield in jamboree action. Roman ran the kick-off and punt returns.

Varsity complied 1-7-1 record, defeating Elmhurst

Coaches Brown, Meador, Doehrman, and Hunter conferred at the Jamboree. With Mr. Hunter being the only returning coach from last year's squad, the coaching staff had many new faces.

The varsity football team, under the guidance of first year head coach Duane Brown, compiled a one-win, five-loss, one-tie record in city competition, and a one-win, seven-loss, one-tie record in overall competition.

Although no homecoming was held, the season did have some added attractions for the spectator, as both dads' night and spirit week were held.

North's only victory came one week before spirit week and the Snider game, which was the last game of the year. This was the Elmhurst contest, with North victorious, 20-0.

Leading the scoring for the Redskins was senior end Ken Barnett, with 32 points on 5 touchdowns and 2 extra points. Following Barnett in scoring were Steve Mann, with three touchdowns, Bill Cowan with two, and Scott Kissinger, Chuck Scheele, and Rick Bair with one each.

Greg Lewis, the team's place kicker, led in extra points with five, followed by Barnett with two and Roman Robles with one.

Junior Joe Fremion fights off a charging blocker in an effort to get shot at the South Side ball carrier. South Side won the game 32-0.

Junior Gary Spice watches the action from the bench, hoping for a chance to play. The Skins remained spirited throughout the year.

Head coach Duane Brown, the second man through on the hamburger drill, often participated. The purpose of this drill was to evade the blocker and tackle the runner.

Reserves, led by Mensch, ended with 2-5-1 year

Sophomore Bruce Ackerman punts another long one for the reserves. Bruce also played quarterback and at one time was up with the varsity, replacing injured Pat Taylor as punter.

The reserve football team, under the direction of coaches Tom Doehrman and Don Hunter, fought their way to a two-win, five-loss, one-tie record in the 68 season.

After winning strongly over Concordia, the reserves lost their next three games to Snider, South, and Central before dueling to a tie with Dwenger. A 12 to 7 win over Luers followed before season finale against New Haven, which was lost 19-0.

Leading the reserves in scoring was Tom Mensch, scoring eight touchdowns. Following with one touchdown each were Bruce Ackerman, Kevin Macy, and Ralph Ravovskis.

Neil Anderson crosses the finish line to win the sectionals and qualify for the regionals, in which he placed a disappointing 48th.

Won state meet

A state trophy topped off the cross country season, as Redskin harriers, led by head coach Duane Rowe and his assistant Mr. John Walter, proved they were the best. Their victory in the state meet was made possible because of time and effort put forth by the team, the individual runners, and the coaches. North sent twelve men to the state meet, but only six were allowed to run. The first five finishers counted in the scoring. Tom Blakely led the team by finishing twelfth, Neil Anderson thirteenth, with Tom Zumbaugh, Bill Loechner, and Steve Brown finishing in the top thirty.

Before the state meet, Neil Anderson won sectionals and Tom Blakely, a senior, was North's top runner throughout the season, closely followed by Neil Anderson. The team had a successful season leading up to the state meet, being beaten only in the Shortridge Invitational, where they placed sixth among the best in the state.

The reserve squad had a winning season also, being beaten only once by Snider.

Mark Norris, John Menocal, Bill Junk, and Steve Brown, all members of the varsity team, run some sprints during practice in preparation for an approaching city meet.

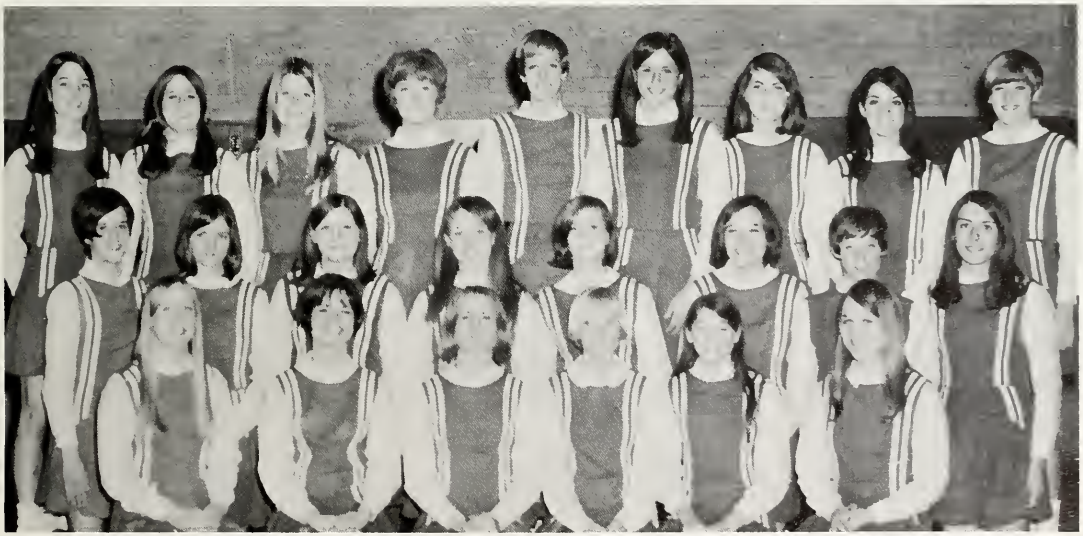
Junior Sharman Harter, one of the varsity cheerleaders, generates some excitement in the fans during the sectionals.

During half-time, the varsity cheerleaders show their sportsmanship on the football field by sharing cokes and conversation with the visiting cheerleaders from South Bend St. Joe.

at pep rallies, athletic events

Season ticket holders selected varsity cheerleaders Amy Fremion, Sue Shoup, Pam Mertz, Sharman Harter, Debbie Fiandt, and Sandy Fick last spring. In addition to devoting seventh period to practice and leading the school spirit and enthusiasm at pep sessions and athletic events, the cheerleaders sponsored a dance and assisted the pom pom girls, who also used seventh period for practice. The squad, under the guidance of Mrs. Lynn Beer, hosted several cheerleading clinics during the year. The 24 member reserve squad, which consisted of juniors and sophomores, boosted spirit at reserve athletic contests, breaking up into groups of six, which cheered alternately throughout the year. At pep sessions, the pom pom girls performed various routines and held the "North Side Redskin" banner.

The varsity cheerleaders, with Sandy Fick in the lead, do the "TEAM" cheer during the pep session before the Snider football game. A Redskin favorite, the cheer is performed often.



The reserve cheerleaders are (front row) Denise Hansen, Diane Dietz, Deb Dale, Sue Eiser, Patsy Beard, Sandy Westerhausen. The Fugimo are John Gray, Donny Thompson, Darrell Wells, Rich Seewald, Doug Giffen, Steve Meyer, and Jim Bower. Fugimo finished with an 18-2 seasonal record.

Intramurals, again confined to seventh period, saw much spirited action. The football season was the first to pass, with the Fugimos taking all the honors by winning both the seasonal crown and the tournament. Basketball then appeared, with the big attraction being the team consisting of faculty members. After the initial laugh had passed, they proceeded to win the season crown with a 37-4 record.

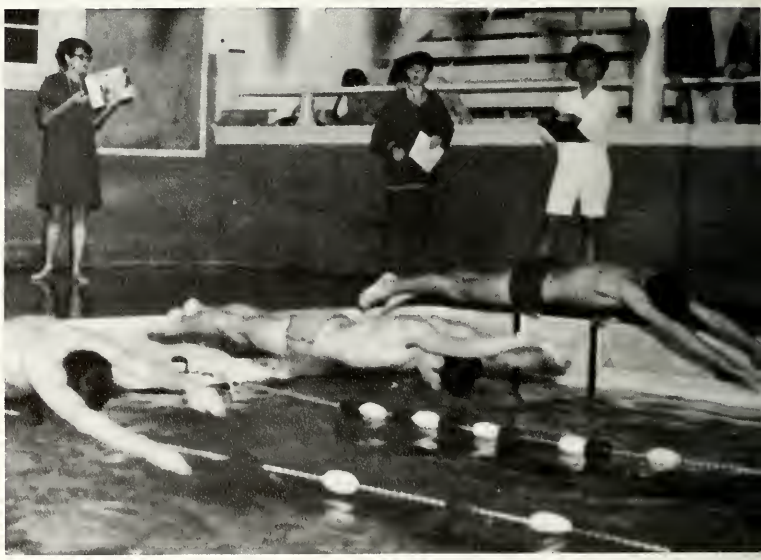
Tankers, backed by medley relay team, captured

Lead by the coaching of Norm Fisher, the tankers compiled a record of 4-7, three meets better than last year. The medley relay team composed of Mike Spencer, backstroke; Dan Thompson, breaststroke; Steve Howenstine, butterfly; and Mike Shimel, freestyle, finished in the top position at every meet. Strong performances in the diving competition also added points toward team victories. Returning lettermen will give Coach Fisher an experienced group of boys for next year's squad.

Senior Skip Barthold, diving from the board, attempts to find the perfect form in order to gain extra points toward a possible victory for his team.

Mike Shimel gasps for air while competing in the butterfly. Mike participated as a regular member of the medley relay team.



Attempting to get a fast start, the Redskin tankers spring from the pool's edge, hoping to finish in a top position to beat out their rivals.

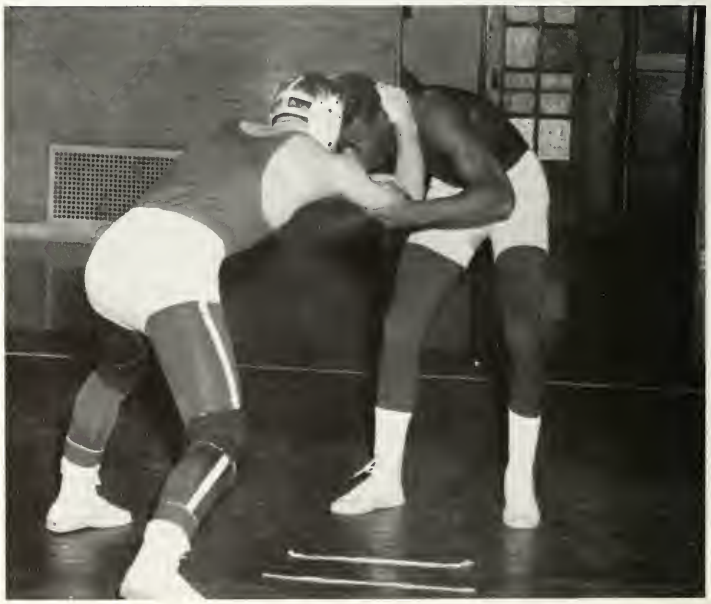
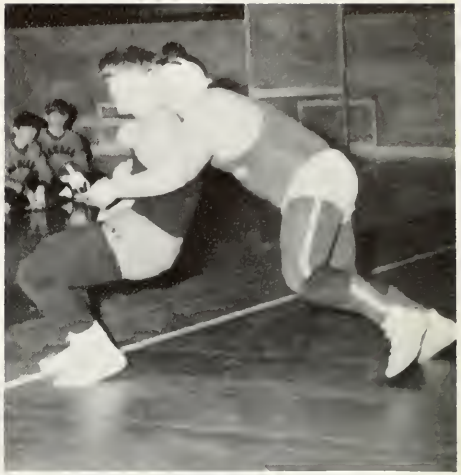
Sophomore Perry Shilts scores two points over an opponent, while the fans cheer him on. North won against DeKalb 30-24.

Reserve wrestler sophomore Ed Cook tries to outthink his opponent before making his next move, hoping to add points to the team score, thus helping toward a victory.



Every team needs practice. Here the grapplers stage little meets among themselves in order to improve their form. The boys practiced for hours on end in order to be able to win.



Denny Parker, wrestling in the heavyweight division, forces his foe from Warsaw off the mat. North lost 30-26.

The grapplers practiced many hours with the help of coach Donald Hunter, but still they had a disappointing season. The varsity ended with a 2-7 record and the reserves with a 4-7 standing. The varsity team consisted of an equal number of underclassmen and seniors. These underclassmen, in addition to the juniors and sophomores from the reserve team, will make up an experienced team next year.

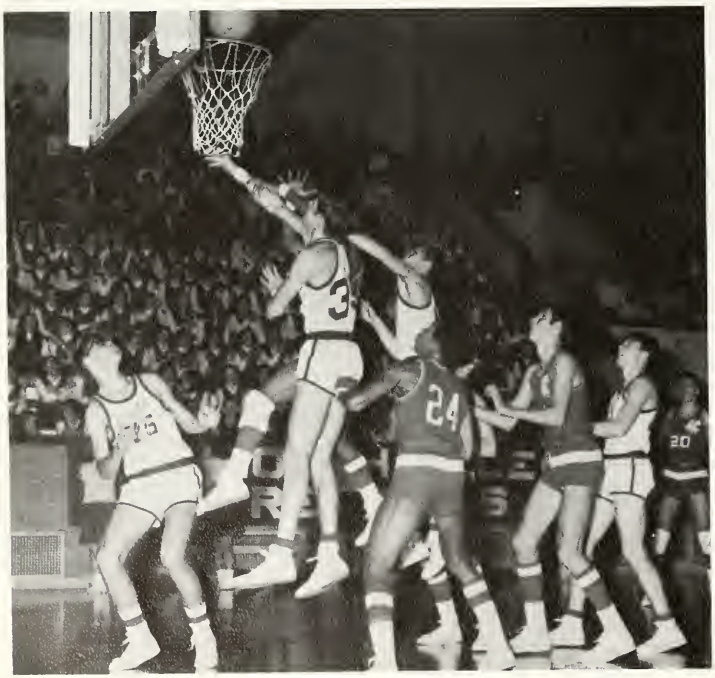
'Skins form a victory huddle after North's win over Central Catholic in the championship game of the regionals. The final score was 73-54.

Varsity, following slow start, came on strong to



A chant from the cheerblocks was often answered by a rebound. John Ankenbruck, Bill Hinga, and Tim Beck fight for the ball against Muncie South.

The outlook appeared dismal for the varsity at the beginning of the season, as they lost their first four games. Winning their following six contests, they proceeded to a 13-7 seasonal record and third place in city competition with a 5-3 win-loss record. Achieving a 62.55 offensive average and a 56.45 defensive average during the regular season, the varsity Redskins were led on offense by senior guard Ken Barnett who, at the end of the season, attained another height by being named to the All-City team. Joining Barnett on that team and following closely in scoring was senior forward Bill Hinga. These two also contributed much to the defensive effort. North's superior defense often kept the 'Skins in the game until their determined and sometimes explosive offense took charge. Another asset of the mighty Big Red was a powerful and balanced bench strength, which was later illustrated in the IHSAA tournament at the end of the season, with players John Ankenbruck, Fred Craft, and others filling in when members of the starting five needed rest.

Tim Beck ups a shot in the Central game. Tim had 11 points, but North lost the contest, 56-55, to the Tigers. Doug Brown, 21, and Bill Hinga, 35, wait for a rebound.

Varsity and reserve hoopmen participate in an intra-squad scrimmage session. They fought hard to defeat each other in practice.

Understudies ended with record-setting 16-4 mark

Steve Heiniger moves toward the Dwenger basket with the score and time plainly in sight. The reserves won the thriller, 44-42.

Joe Lombard, the only sophomore on the varsity this season, awaits his turn to go into the South game. North won, 65-43.

The reserve basketball team had a successful season, accomplishing a new record of 16-4, the finest ever for a reserve squad. Leading the way was junior guard Steve Heiniger with 239 points. Second in total points was Mike Kipling with 164. Following were Joe Lombard, 144; Chuck Scheele, 133; and Rich Yost, 117. After an early season romp against Goshen, the underclassmen saw the competition get tougher and the scores grow closer. At the end of the season, five members of the reserves, juniors Rich Yost, Steve Heiniger, Chuck Scheele, Mike Kipling, and sophomore Joe Lombard, were rewarded by being placed on the sectional varsity squad. These same players saw some action in varsity contests during the season. The reserves finished their stellar season with an eight-game win string. In the twenty game season, they scored 959 points, allowing 777 for their opponents. The offensive average was 47.95 points, while the defensive average per game was 38.85 points, amounting to a plus 9.10 difference in North's favor.

Senior Kerry Kennel, number one in the pole vault, shows his determination against South Side in helping the team by clearing the bar.

Junior Mike Kipling stretches low over a over a high hurdle in a meet with Bishop Dwenger and Central. Mike is also one of the numerous returning lettermen from last year's team.

Head Coach Duane Rowe leads the track team in calisthenics before a practice session. The exercises help to prevent the boys from injury during practice as well as during meets.

Last year the track team, under head coach Duane Rowe and assistants John Walter and Hyrle Ivy, had an 8-8 record. This year's squad, comprised of many returning lettermen from the 1968 team, revealed a balanced attack in all fields.

Tennis team's season topped by city title

The tennis team, headed by captain John Ankenbruck, captured the city championship by defeating the Concordia Cadets 4-3 in the final match of the season. North Side and Concordia were the only undefeated teams in the city before battling for the city crown. Coach Myron Henderson led his team to a perfect 8-0 record in city competition and a 9-1 record overall. Returing lettermen will leave Coach Henderson a well experienced team for next season, as Roger Cole is the only graduating member.

Tourney fever epidemic attacked Redskin country

Tourney-time had many faces, including those of the fans and those of the players. While the varsity held its composure, the fans screamed, cried, shouted, and cheered, revealing emotions ranging from relief to disappointment. Redskin derbies, corsages, and "pride" buttons framed the faces throughout the tourney fever epidemic.

North continued its seasonal progress with a fine tournament showing. In the sectionals, North beat Leo 63-50 and Concordia 71-57, before winning the championship game from New Haven 69-58. By Hey's Redskins then progressed to the regional, meeting the Barons of Dekalb, who had defeated North earlier in the season. The score was close throughout the contest, with North finally winning, 49-47. In the evening game for the regional title, North defeated city foe Central Catholic, 73-54. North's final revenge victory of the year came over Goshen in the afternoon game of the semi-state. The Redskins defeated their opponents, 63-55 to advance to the night game against Marion. This was North's final game of the campaign, as Marion won, 67-54.

John Ankenbruck and Doug Brown reach for a rebound while blocking two Irish hoopsters. Ankenbruck and Brown combined efforts during North's march through the tournament.

Six-foot-ten-inch junior Doug Brown rebounds against Dekalb in the regionals. Bill Hinga, 35, awaits a possible pass. Bill scored 22 points for the Redskins in the afternoon game.

SENIOR DOOR

"for her honor and her glory"

CLOSING

As summer drew near, Redskins projected themselves into the future—seniors looking toward hurried schedules on college campuses, in the business world, or in marriage; juniors looking forward to senior traditions; and sophomores relishing the thought of having a group of underclassmen to "look down on."

We wish to extend a special thank you to the members of the 1969 Legend staff for their time and effort and to our adviser, Miss Thiele, for her patience and supervision. We also wish to extend our appreciation to Watters Studio, to Larry Glaze of Paragon, and to Jack Bundy of the S.K. Smith Company, for their special assistance in making this publication possible.
